

Most Annoying Habit By Region

Scotland – “Is there anything worse than colleagues not washing mugs and leaving them in the communal space?”

North East – “We don’t care who you are – It’s never acceptable to interrupt us when we’re eating our food”

North West – “It really annoys me when people take credit for my work”

Yorkshire and the Humber – “We hate when colleagues don’t pull their weight and leave or pass on their workload to others”

East Midlands – “When people leave their desks a mess – leave the room as you found it!”

West Midlands – “When people make silly noises or talk loudly in the office when you’re trying to concentrate”

East Anglia – “That one colleague who eats smelly food loudly near me”

Greater London – “When someone tells you that they’re going to do something but then they break their promise”

South East – “General loudness is a trigger. Talking loudly, typing loudly and tapping the desk... loudly”

South West – “When colleagues talk quietly about other people in front of others”

Wales – “When people try and talk to you when you don’t want them to”

Northern Ireland – “We hate being ignored. If we say ‘good morning’, you’d better respond”
